Baiga Head (Bhola)

Gond Head (Ratan)

A group of students visits a tribal village in Madhya Pradesh. The Baiga and Gond heads warmly welcome them to their village.

Yashvin: Namaste Uncles! We have read about your tribes in our school books. Can you tell us more about your history and way of life?

Bhola (Baiga Head): Namaste, children. I am Bhola the head of the Baiga tribe. The Baigas are one of the oldest tribes.

Yashvin: Sir, what does Baiga mean?

Bhola: Baiga means 'sorcerer-medicine man', as we are spiritual healers, priests, and we practice magic also.

Yashvin: Oh yes, in our chapter we read that Baigas are healers.

Bhola: We have Gunia and Tonahi, our traditional healers.

Gunias use a combination of herbal medicines and spiritual rituals like Jhad Phook with the chant of sacred mantras. Tonahi is a woman who possesses mysterious power control supernatural forces.

Yashvin: Ohh! That sounds scary.

Bhola: Don't worry. We do it only for the benefit of our community. Gonds also consult us in the matters of health, agriculture, and spirituality.

Ratan (Gond Head): We Gonds too have a long history. We are known for our vibrant art, rich folklore, and deep reverence for nature.

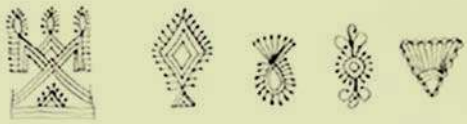

Aarav: Yes sir, we've heard that your tribes live very close to nature. Can you tell us how?

Bhola: We have a spiritual connection with nature. We call earth 'Dharti Mata'. We practice Bewar farming which is a type of slash-and-burn agriculture. We grow millets like Kodo, Kutki, Mahua, and Bajra.

Himani: And what about your traditions, Bhola ji?

Bhola: Our women have special tattoos 'Godna', that tell us about their identity and culture. These tattoos are made with vegetable- based dyes and serve as permanent adornment..

We also love our Karma dance, which is performed around a tree branch to celebrate life and the changing seasons.

Himani: Sir, where is your temple? We want to see that.

Bhola: For us, the forest is our temple. We worship Bada Deo and other local gods under trees.

Ratan: We also worship Bada Deo and our ancestors' spirits.

Himani: What is Bada Deo?

Ratan: Bada Deo is our creator who is believed to reside in the 'Saja' tree.

Himani: Your traditions are full of respect for nature.

Bhola: Yes. We believe in balanced and interconnected existence.

Ratan: May the present and future generations also value and preserve the nature, rather than merely seeing it as a resource.

Bhola: That's true. The forest gives us life and therefore we must conserve them.

Ratan: We wish that everyone learns from us - to live simply, respect the earth, and stay united.

Aarav: Thank you Sir! We will never forget the lessons of the Baigas and Gonds - to live in harmony with people and nature and the resilience of the communities.
